

President's message

One of the great and valuable achievements of the holy Islamic government is to develop scientific centers and universities, and reach modern scientific technology of the world. Azarbaijan Shahid Madani University as a progeny of Islamic revolution is one of the important scientific and research poles and the second large state university in northwest of Iran. It is going to begin its third decade of activities due to a great deal of self-sacrifice of university's hard-working managers within the past 20 years.

Their attempts have caused this new sapling to change into a robust tree with very sweet fruit, i.e. training young generations who are eager for science and culture. I cherish the memory of those darlings who made an attempt to elevate the university and its higher goals, and I also feel very honored to be by my diligent colleagues in this university, working in scientific and literary fields and register my name by my friends' in the honorable book of science and culture.

I should thank all gentlemen who made the effort to establish such an invaluable complex and hope that even more endeavors will be made to document the university development and related activities to the forthcoming generations.
